

KETTERING HEALTH BENGALS PARTNERSHIP

When Kettering Health was chosen as the official healthcare provider of the Cincinnati Bengals, it brought together our organizations' community-focused missions, empowering us to continue elevating the health and well-being of our communities. Together, we reached thousands throughout western Ohio—and the nation—with our message of and passion for innovative, compassionate healthcare. And we're just getting started.

FLAG-IN-SCHOOL PROGRAM

Through the Flag-In-School program, Kettering Health and the Bengals donated flag-football kits to 50 schools. Each kit included a 10-week flag-football curriculum, flag belts, footballs, and pinnies—not to mention the incredible memories students made and will enjoy for years to come.

BENGALS LEGENDS EVENT AT KETTERING HEALTH CANCER CENTER

In September, a dozen former Bengals players, or Bengals Legends, visited Kettering Health Cancer Center to assemble more than 800 care packages, sign banners, and share video messages to encourage patients and employees of Kettering Health's cancer centers. Before the event finished, several players visited with patients, getting to know their names and encouraging them in their journeys.

TOPPING THE CHARTS

Kettering Health and the Bengals topped the charts for health system—professional sports team partnerships on social media with an incredible 1.7 million engagements, as reported by SponserUnited.

TRAINING CAMP

Bengals Training Camp draws thousands of fans to downtown Cincinnati to watch their team prepare for the season. More than 14,000 fans visited Kettering Health Practice Fields in July and August. Kettering Health employees volunteered to hand out sunscreen and sunglasses to fans and hosted a photo booth for fans to capture their training-camp memories. Kettering Health's EMS Outreach team also provided on-site first aid services. It was a great time to help Bengals fans get excited for the upcoming season.

CRUCIAL CATCH

Through the NFL's Crucial Catch program, a year-round initiative, Kettering Health and the Cincinnati Bengals provided our communities with tools and resources to elevate awareness of cancer risk and cancer screenings.

We also impacted the lives of cancer survivors and those involved in cancer care in unforgettable ways. In October, cancer survivors and care providers from Kettering Health attended a special practice where they met players leading up to the big Crucial Catch game. The game kicked off with Kettering Health's very own Jami Holbrook singing the national anthem. Throughout the game, more than 10,000 fans held up their Kettering Health "I Celebrate" signs, on which they wrote the name of a loved one affected by cancer. We also honored survivors during a special halftime ceremony. Survivors rang a victory bell made for the occasion, signifying their victory over cancer. More than 40 Kettering Health team members volunteered to support the event, and two employees were honored as "Hometown Heroes" during the third quarter.

CELEBRATING WITH EMPLOYEES

Throughout the year, we connected the partnership to the everyday ebbs-and-flows of life throughout the system.

- We celebrated "Who Dey Fridays" and "Who Dey Sundays," when employees proudly wore their Kettering Health–Bengals co-branded gear.
- More than 5,000 employees entered to win home-game tickets.
- We hosted Who Dey and the Ben Gals at events throughout the year, including Hospital Week celebrations and employee picnics.
- We shared different Kettering Health team members' Bengals stories on social media.

Kettering Health’s story has always been shaped by innovation and compassion.

Like the backbones of a strand of DNA, innovation and compassion have supported our approach to patient-focused healthcare. Since our first days, nearly 60 years ago, our heritage of innovation has compelled us to elevate industry standards of care, and our foundation of faith has inspired us to extend care that honors the dignity of every patient and meets their physical, mental, and emotional needs.

As we consider the chapter of our story that was 2022, we see evidence of innovation and compassion at every facility. From incorporating the newest in medical technology to developing new protocols for patient and employee safety, our employee family demonstrated why we remain the area’s leader in precise, cutting-edge care. And they continued to embody the best in patient-centered healthcare, upholding our legacy of compassionate care that’s needed in today’s world—more than ever.

2022 was an important year. Navigating almost constant change, our team members found remarkable resilience by revisiting what sets Kettering Health apart. And in doing so, prepared Kettering Health for its next chapter of serving patients with the same innovation and compassion that makes Kettering Health the first choice in healthcare for our communities.

You could say it’s in our DNA.

“Our imagination is the only limit to what we can hope to have in the future.”

—Charles F. Kettering

“The LORD is good to all; He has compassion on all that He has made.”

—Psalm 135:9

KETTERING HEALTH 2022 AT A GLANCE

This past year, we expanded our reach, ensuring more communities had access to compassionate care. We empowered patients to enjoy their best health through advanced technology. And we continued to embody the health, healing, and hope our neighbors experience when they choose Kettering Health.

14,983 employees
1,696 physicians on staff
1,144 volunteers
1,432,343 outpatient visits
6,106 babies delivered
1,596 licensed beds
67,121 discharges
362,632 emergency visits

EXPANDING THE REACH OF COMPASSIONATE CARE

In July, Kettering Health Oxford Health Center opened to provide the area primary care services as well as women's health care, heart and vascular care, and general surgery consultation.

THE IMMEASURABLE VALUE OF VOLUNTEERS

Our volunteers play an indispensable role in fulfilling the mission of Kettering Health to our patients. In countless ways, they bring an extra measure of compassion and humanity to all their interactions with patients and their families. In fact, in 2022, our volunteers served patients with a total of 142,048 hours throughout our system.

The Kettering Health Pharmacy Department received the American Society of Health System Pharmacists (ASHP) National Best Practices Award for an innovative process for COVID-19 treatment. The team developed a centralized method to manage COVID-19 outpatient treatment and medicine inventory, ensuring equal treatment with oral medication and monoclonal antibodies for Kettering Health patients.

EMPOWERING PATIENTS WITH INNOVATIVE CARE

Kettering Health became the first in the Dayton region to care for patients using the state-of-the-art Siemens Vision 600 PET/ST scanner.

This scanner requires shorter scan times and uses less radiation, limiting patients' exposure and allowing for more appointment times. The scanner is being used to research Alzheimer's disease, treat brain tumors, and help advance care for prostate and breast cancers.

EMBODYING HEALTH, HEALING, AND HOPE

The team at Kettering Health Behavioral Medical Center was named a "Best of Dayton" in the Health & Medical category, being named Best Mental Health/Drug Addiction facility.

In March 2022, employees and leaders from across Kettering Health came together to observe a day of prayer for Ukraine. Kettering Health executive and chaplain leaders led our people through a time of reflection and prayer for those affected by the invasion and other global conflicts throughout the world.

The skybridge connecting Kettering Health Main Campus and the cancer center was lit in Ukraine's colors of yellow and blue.

In April 2022, the new Courageous Beauty program opened, offering monthly classes for patients navigating cancer treatment to improve their confidence and self-esteem. In these classes, patients learn makeup tips, how to wear wigs and head coverings, and how to care for their skin and nails during treatment. The program also provides patients with a unique support system through interaction with others going through treatment.

HEALTHCARE PARTNERS

In May, the Cincinnati Bengals announced that they chose Kettering Health to be their official healthcare provider. This important partnership draws together the organizations' community-focused missions and brings in Kettering Health's second-to-none care to support the Bengals' athletic excellence and the well-being of their passionate fanbase.

HEALTHCARE PARTNERSHIP STADIUM-SIZED CARE

As part of the partnership with the Cincinnati Bengals, Kettering Health's Emergency Outreach team exemplified quick thinking, deep expertise, and remarkable compassion throughout the year at Paycor Stadium, preparing for and providing care to hundreds of thousands of fans.

Tony Alexander feels the thud of a kick drum shake his chest. Amplified guitar riffs follow, echoing throughout Paycor Stadium. On the field below, the sound check concludes before Friday night of the Cincinnati Music Festival. Stadium staff anticipate 34,000 people.

Tony adjusts the volume on his radio. Behind him, concertgoers gather outside Gate C. The gate, tonight's main entrance, is a few steps away from the Plaza, the largest of Kettering Health's five first-aid stations in the stadium.

He looks the way one would expect Kettering Health's director of Emergency Management and Outreach to look: A walking mission-control center, he communicates through a radio, an earpiece connected to his cell phone, and face-to-face conversation. He turns to four nurses, two of whom are wearing ambulance-red and neon-yellow backpacks filled with 20 pounds of medical gear. "Take care of yourselves," he reminds them in a fatherly tone. "It's hot."

Today's temperature hovers at 95 degrees, nearly 110 on the field. Add the weighted blanket of humidity, and the stadium is equal parts concert venue and sauna.

Tony walks into the Plaza. Inside, an air conditioner the size of a small car roars as others ready water, ice (lots of ice), and medical supplies—organized on large roller carts—before the gates open at 6:30 p.m. The room holds three patient beds separated by curtains and two cots to transport patients to ambulances outside. Tony talks with Nancy Pook, MD, tonight's on-site physician. A digital wall clock reads 6:21.

A wave of heat cuts through the artificially cooled air as the Plaza doors open. Stadium staff bring in two women who collapsed outside the gate—and the room snaps into action.

1400 HOURS OF PREPARATION

The Cincinnati Music Festival is the second stadium event for Kettering Health's Emergency Outreach team since the Bengals announced Kettering Health as their official healthcare provider in May 2022.

Four days after the announcement, the Outreach team arrived for their first stadium event: a weekend of Garth Brooks concerts. But weeks before Brooks took the stage, they needed to create protocols, transport supplies, and learn the ins-and-outs of the 1.8-million-square-foot stadium.

"We put in 1400 hours of preparation," says Tony. This included meetings among Outreach team leaders such as Tony, the Department of Homeland Security, the FBI, Cincinnati Fire and Police departments, and stadium staff.

Event medicine is nothing new for the Outreach team, who've served at many local events, such as the Dayton Air Show and the Air Force Marathon. But preparing to provide care on a scale the size of a football stadium requires experience and ingenuity. "The challenges are different at a stadium versus a 26.1-mile course," explains Tony. "At the stadium, nearly 70,000 people are confined in a small space. You're preparing care for a small city."

"WHERE IS MY SEAT?"

In the Plaza, Katie Ball sits with one of the overheated women from Gate C. A Kettering Health Hamilton emergency nurse, Katie speaks softly while remaining audible over the air-conditioner and the clamor of the concert muffled by the doors.

After some rest and water, the patient stands with Katie's help. Katie then grabs her heavy medical backpack and walks toward the doors. She and Harley Paxon, a Kettering Health Miamisburg emergency nurse, are one of three roaming teams tonight. Like the other 30 team members, they wear gray shirts with "MEDICAL TEAM" across the back; pants with cargo pockets holding stethoscopes; and tennis shoes. When the concert ends at 12:45 a.m., they'll have walked more than eight miles in six hours.

They roam portions of the stadium, responding to anyone needing care. Dehydration burdens most patients, even those in the shade of the concession-stand tunnels where the humid air is popcorn scented. As more people enter, the roaming teams increasingly encounter tonight's most popular—and unanticipated—question: "Excuse me, where is my seat?"

A MASS CASUALTY INCIDENT

"There's always an element of chaos," Tony said. "But you try to control what you can." That chaos may include directing hundreds of attendees to stadium staff for help finding their seats. Or it might be the challenges of torrential rain or oppressive heat.

At 11 p.m., the Cincinnati Fire Department declares downtown an MCI—mass casualty incident—because of the heat. Doing so funnels resources to area hospitals, helping them stay on top of the blistering number of heat-related emergencies coming from the concert and a nearby Cincinnati Reds baseball game.

With almost 30 years' experience, Tony has seen event medicine grow more challenging, even dangerous. He knows his role is to care for those at an event by caring for his team, preparing them to care for others during normal and critical situations.

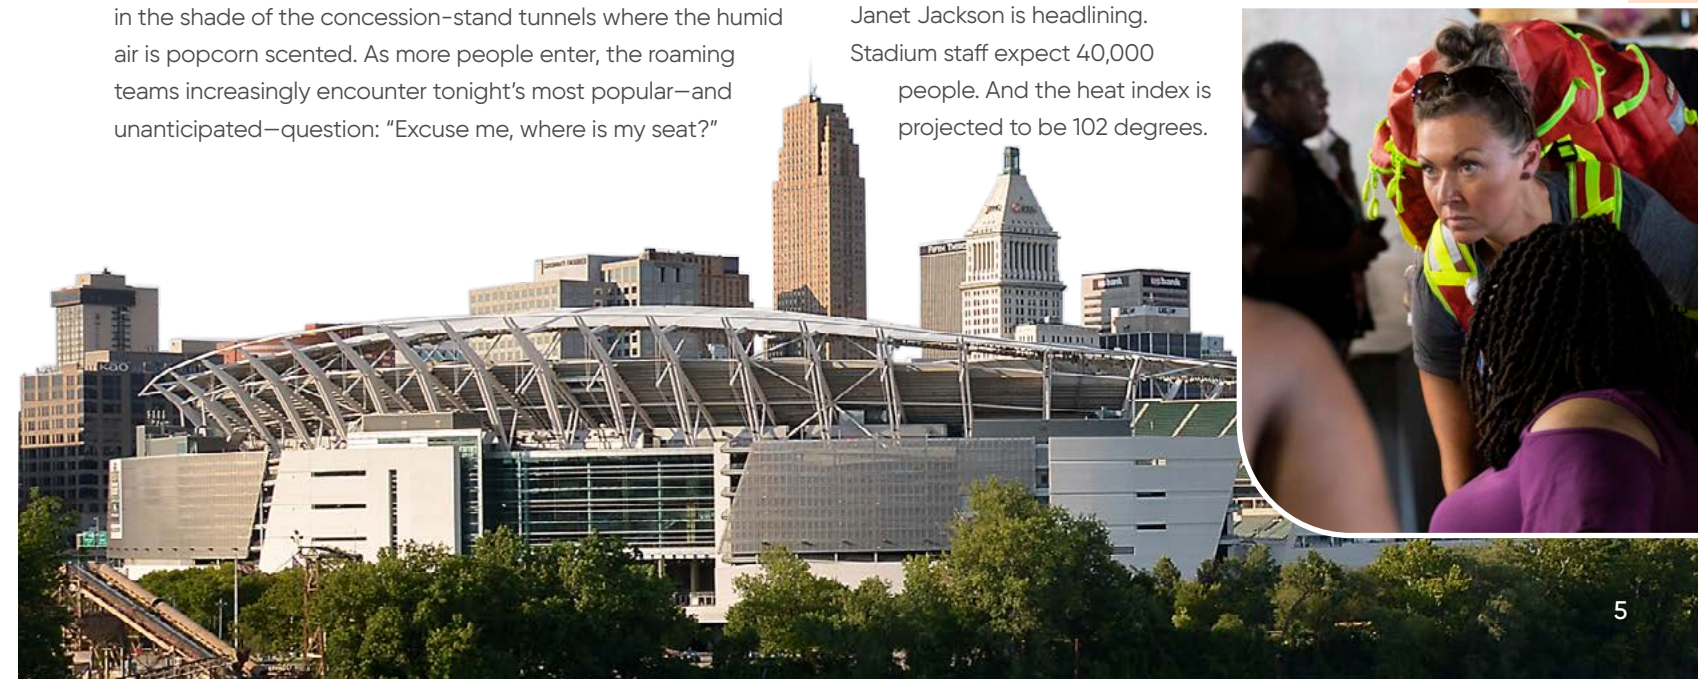

34,000 PEOPLE UNAWARE

Tony walks toward the Plaza as the night's last act finishes.

On his way, he pauses, taking in the concert's final minutes. As the stage and stands glow purple and blue, the artist's voice and the crowd's singing melt together to become a 34,000-person choir—most of whom sing unaware of the canopy of care around them, until they need it. For Tony, that's how it should be.

He and the team wait to leave until the stadium is empty of concertgoers. Hitting the road at 1:30 a.m., Tony starts his two-hour drive home. In fewer than 12 hours, he'll return to lead another team of Outreach coordinators and nurses for Saturday night.

Janet Jackson is headlining. Stadium staff expect 40,000 people. And the heat index is projected to be 102 degrees.

SPANNING AND SERVING WESTERN OHIO

Central to our vision is to transform our area's communities through our unique approach to healthcare. Bringing together our passion for innovation and spirit of compassion, we aim to ensure that every neighbor will have access to the health, healing, and hope of God's love in a caring environment. And this past year, our employee family and the growing network of facilities they serve continued to remind our neighbors why they choose Kettering Health.

KETTERING HEALTH MAIN CAMPUS

CARING FOR THE COMMUNITY—ONE GALLON AT A TIME

In April 2022, the Plant Engineering team at Kettering Health Main Campus installed a state-of-the-art water harvesting system, reducing the facility's water usage by 75%. The system will take the facility's water usage from about 16 million gallons a year to three to four million.

The system ensures the facility continues to function in an environmentally conscious way as we provide reliable care to our community when they need it most.

LEADING THE CHARGE

Kettering Health performed the first robotic-assisted partial knee replacement with the Zimmer Biomet ROSA in southwest Ohio at Kettering Health Miamisburg.

The procedure uses precise incisions and image-based technology to help the surgeon avoid soft tissue, leading to a quicker recovery for the patient.

ADVANCING JOINT REPLACEMENTS

Kettering Health Miamisburg also performed its first Mako robotic-assisted procedure in 2022.

The Mako system uses a 3D model of a patient's unique anatomy for more precision and accuracy. Orthopedic surgeons using this technology can better determine the optimal size, placement, and positioning of the implant, making for a more successful joint replacement.

ELEVATING HERNIA CARE IN HAMILTON

Dr. James Parker and Dr. Andrew Lichter performed Kettering Health Hamilton's first eTEP hernia repair surgery.

Typically reserved for patients with very large, complicated hernias, the operation is performed robotically, creating four small holes through which the hernia is repaired. Historically, patients with these types of hernias would need open surgery with a three- to five-day hospital stay to recover. Now, patients can go home the same day and expect less pain, faster recovery, and less risk of infection.

HELPING THE COMMUNITY HEAL

Kettering Health Hamilton leadership and employees joined the community to recognize and honor those who passed away from COVID-19 in Hamilton and Butler Counties.

A fully accredited college offering degrees in health sciences, Kettering College was founded in 1967 as a division of Kettering Health Main Campus. Kettering College consistently has board-pass rates that exceed the national average and has been ranked among the best value degrees in healthcare education.

“Having teachers praying with you before an exam—you don't think that means anything to you, but at the end of the day it means a lot. Those little touches make a huge difference. You wouldn't get this support and personal focus at a bigger college. It feels like a family here.”

—Paig Hermiller, 2022 Kettering College graduate

WELCOMING THE WORLD TO KETTERING COLLEGE

In the fall, Kettering College began to welcome 50 students—mostly from Ukraine—displaced by the Russian invasion as part of the “Education Emergency Plan.”

The plan involved asking Seventh-day Adventist colleges and universities to help support students whose education was disrupted.

The Euro-Asia Division (ESD) is the Adventist organization that creates access to education for those in need. The ESD worked with the incoming students to ensure their English skills would help them succeed in an all-English college. And Kettering College staff and faculty developed new processes and protocols for these students.

“There are going to be challenges, no question about it,” Kettering College President

Nate Brandstater said. “But the challenges we'll encounter with this initiative will be an incredible blessing to this group of students and our community.”
